

ORGANTO FOODS INC.

BILL S-211 REPORT

For the Year Ended
December 31, 2024

May 29, 2025

SUMMARY

Organto is engaged in the sourcing, processing, packaging, distribution, and marketing of organic and non-genetically modified (“non-GMO”) fruit and vegetable products. We employ a business model that links growers with premium end markets using our “field to the table” expertise. Driven by consumer and retailer demand for healthy and organic food products, we continue to build out a platform to deliver value-added branded, private label and bulk distributed products to meet these needs via an integrated business model with diverse sourcing, logistics, processing, packaging, distribution and marketing capabilities. Our objective is to provide year-round product supply for many of our products and complete traceability from the table back to the field. Our model is rooted in our commitment to sustainable business practices focused on environmental responsibility and our commitment to the communities where we operate, our people and our shareholders.

Organto goes to market in Europe.

Organto is committed to conducting business in adherence with the highest standards of integrity, responsibility and ethical behaviour and is committed to protecting human rights and upholding responsible labour practices. Organto believes that operating in an ethical manner and upholding human rights is crucial to its long-term business success and demands that its global supply chain partners operate in a similar fashion including preventing forced and child labour.

Organto is committed to engaging in employment practices that meet all ethical and legal standards, including laws and regulations related to forced and child labour, in the markets in which it operates. Organto expects its suppliers, and its suppliers’ suppliers, to share and uphold these same commitments across their business operations as well.

Organto employees, as well as workers engaged by its suppliers’ operations, must work under voluntary conditions. Organto’s policy is for it and its suppliers to not use any form of forced or involuntary labour, including prison labour, indentured labour, bonded labour, military labour, slave labour or any form of human trafficking.

The use of child labour that contravenes local labour laws in areas where Organto or its suppliers operate is strictly prohibited. Management is responsible for ensuring that child labour does not occur at any of the Organto’s locations as well as managing the risk of child labour in existing or potential supply chain partners.

Organto has policies and procedures in place ensure compliance with, and to reinforce and clarify its commitments to responsible labour practices, including preventing the use of forced or child labour. These policies and procedures are reviewed regularly to ensure their effectiveness and include information requests to validate conformance or on-site visits or inspections. Suppliers are expected to report any known or suspected violations of labour laws and Organto will work with suppliers to develop and implement a plan for remediation. As soon as Organto becomes aware of a violation, either on its own or via a third party, Organto will temporarily suspend that supplier and immediately initiate an investigation. Organto will terminate its relationship with any supplier that is either unwilling or fails to make necessary changes to their practices. Suppliers in a higher risk country (see <https://info.worldbank.org/governance/wgi>) are required to provide audited proof that they meet a satisfactory ethics standard.

Organto has a Whistleblower Policy portal on its website that accessible by both internal and external users where any concerns or issues of non-compliance or questionable practices can be reported, without fear of reprisal.
